SETTLERS' RIGHTS ASSOCIATION.

Such is the designation of an association at Qu'Appelle, having for its object—

1st. In the absence of any representation of the wants or grievances of the settlers of the North West in Parliament or in the Councils of the country, to take up, discuss and represent them to the proper authorities, and use every legitimate measure to have them redressed.

2nd. To press for needed reforms in the land laws.

3rd. To urge on the Dominion Government the necessity of making laws as applied to the North West Territories for the benefit of the settlers, and not in the interest of rich corporations or needy officials.

4th. To press for the appointment of such men to positions of trust in the country as shall be acceptable to a people who esteem honesty of purpose in the official as of the first importance and equal rights to all a necessity.

5th. To assist in the settling of the country by emigrants, by locating them on lands and by every means to develop our resources.

The Toronto Globe says "this is a reasonable and moderate statement of the settlers' case as against the land sharks, Dewdney included," and we cannot see that the platform is either unreasonable or immoderate; indeed, judging from the manner in which the business of the North West is at present being managed, we think it is very moderate, and only regret that there are not more of these settlers' rights associations in the country. If they had been inaugurated twelve months ago they would have spread all over the Territories before the last session of the Dominion Parliament, and would no doubt have been productive of much good. The one at Qu'Appelle has itself been an eye-sore to the land monopolists, and has received more attention from the Government and the press of Canada than all the other petitioners in the North West grouped together. The only reason why they were not more successful was because they were not sufficiently strong in numbers. Unless we very much mistake the political feeling in the North West, this movement will spread over the country like wild fire and will assume huge proportions ere the meeting of the next session of Parliament. If it only induces the Lieutenant-Governor to call the North West Council together, and listen to its advice when it assembles, such an association will have been productive of much good. Not the least of the significant facts connected with the association is the fact that it is composed entirely of Conservatives, and that such papers as the Winnipeg Times are amongst the warmest advocates of its principles.

SASKATCHEWAN UNIVERSITY.

The establishment of a University degree conferring body will, it is to be hoped, stir into vigorous life those interested in our educational institutions. Already there are indications of a Catholic Seminary and a Presbyterian College, but as these may in time be incorporated, with the power of granting degrees likewise, would it not have been well to have passed such legislation as would have prevented the possibility of a number of different Universities being established in our midst. Manitoba and British Columbia have taken time by the forelock, and in Ontario the Minister of Education is striving to devise some means by which a central examining board would alone grant degrees and thus secure a uniformity of standard. In that province the standard of the five different Universities is far from being uniform, yet the degrees granted by these different institutions have an equal force in law and their graduates are allowed equal privileges as teachers in the High and Public Schools there. Cannot some arrangement be made by which a non-denominational training school could be established for the preparation of students in the classical, mathematical, literary and scientific subjects. We are satisfied that the scheme is one which will commend itself to those interested, and we believe the different Churches would assist in promoting the object. It would in the end save a very large outlay of money for educational purposes to each of the interested denominations, and would secure that uniformity in our infant school system which is being so eagerly sought after in other parts of the country.

HONOR OF KNIGHTHOOD.

The Winnipeg Times thinks that Lieut. Governor Dewdney should receive the honor of knighthood at the hands of Her Majesty the Queen. The almost absolute ruler of a country greater in extent than the whole soil of Russia, one who combines in himself the powers of both Lieutenant Governor and Council, and who therefore never calls his Council together. The monarch supreme who makes and breaks treaties at will, who pays or refuses to pay the accounts of his Department as it suits his royal pleasure; who disregards the rights of all squatters and interferes with the selling of their land because it would lessen the value of that part of the royal domain which is the private and exclusive property of his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, who is able to locate future capitals not where they will be most convenient to the great mass of his humble subjects, but contiguous to certain sections of land which belong to a certain individual who holds them not in a public but in a private capacity, and who by virtue of the great knowledge wherewith he has been inspired is enabled to luxuriate in a more favored clime during the greater part of his time and from thence issue his mandates and govern his patient and long suffering people in a manner entirely satisfactory as well as profitable (to himself), we are inclined to think would regard knighthood as a very doubtful honor. Would it not be more in keeping with his high state to invite the North West Council to undertake a part of his arduous and self-denying work, and to appoint a new Lieut. Governor to do the remainder of it, and thus allow him that "dignified retirement" or oblivion to which he is so justly entitled.

THE INDIAN.

What is to be done with our Indians is a question which must soon become a problem for the Government to solve. Already the annual Indian expenditure is over one million dollars, and it is increasing by hundreds of thousands each year. In the east each Indian becomes the owner of a part of the reserve of the tribe to which he may belong and cultivates his own particular part, and in this way he becomes to a certain extent a landed proprietor, but the reserves are confined exclusively to Indians, and no land can be sold to any person not having a right of occupancy to the reserve. "This clause, while protecting the Indians from being swindled by white men, leaves him with a farm which will only bring about one third of the price that it would be worth in a public market. The intention of the Government, which is to protect the Indian, is also defeated, since the reserves are rapidly becoming the property of only a few of the more industrious Indians. If instead of reserving certain lands in perpetuity the Government were to engage properly qualified teachers and otherwise provide for the education of the Indian youth, they would become good citizens, and might be intrusted with the complete control of their lands. In this way the Indian of the near future would become a self-supporting and important factor of the commonwealth.

FEMALE DOCTORS.

A St. Louis doctor factory recently turned out a dozen female doctors. As long as the female doctors are confined to one or two in the whole country, and there were experimental, the St. Louis doctor factory, and did not complain; but now that the colleges are engaged in procuring female doctors as a business, we must protest, and in so doing will give a few reasons why female doctors will not prove a paying branch of industry.

In the first place, if they doctor any body it must be women, and these fourths of the women had rather have a male doctor. Suppose these colleges turn out a couple of doctors until there are as many of them as there are male doctors, what have they got to practice on?

A man, if there was nothing the matter with him, might call in a female doctor; but if he was sick as a horse, and when a man is sick he is as sick as a horse, the last thing he would have around would be a female doctor. And why? Because when a man wants a female tending around him he wants to feel well. He doesn't want to be hilled, or fussed, with his mouth tasting like cheese, and his eyes bloodshot, when a female is looking over him and talking an account of stock.

Of course these female doctors are all young and good looking, and if one of them came into a sick room where a man was in bed, and he had chills, and was as cold as a wedge, and she should sit up close to the side of the bed, and take hold of his hand, his pulse would run up to a hundred and fifty, and she would procure for a fever which he had chills. Then if he died she could be strated for malpractice. O, you can't test us on female doctors.

A man who has been sick and had male doctors, knows just how he would feel to have a female doctor come tripping in, and throw her fur lined cloak over a chair, take off her hat and gloves, and throw them on a lounge, and come up to the bed with a pair of marble blue eyes, with a twinkle in the corner, and look him in the wild, changeable eyes, and ask him to run out his tongue. Suppose he knew his tongue was coated so it looked like a yellow Turkish towel, do you suppose he would want to run out five or six inches of the lower end of it, and let that female doctor put her finger on it, to see how it was furled? Not much! He would put that tongue up into his cheek, and wouldn't let her see it for twenty-five cents admission.

We have all even doctors put their hands under the lock-bolts, and feel a man's feet to see if they were cold. If a female doctor should do that, it would give a man cramps in the legs.

A male doctor can put his hand on a man's stomach, and liver, and lungs, and ask him if he feels any pain there; but if a female doctor should do the same thing it would make a man sick, and he would want to get up and kick himself for employing a female doctor. O, there is no use talking, it would kill a man.

Now, suppose a man has a heart disease, and a female doctor should want to listen to the beating of his heart. She would lay her left ear on his left breast, so her eyes and roseland mouth would be looking right in his face, and her wavy hair would be scattered all around there, getting tangled in the buttons of his night shirt. Don't you suppose his heart would get about twenty extra beats to the minute? You bet! And she would smile—we will bet ten dollars she would smile—and show her pearly teeth, and her ripe lips would be working as though she was counting the beats, and he would think she was trying to whisper to him, and.

Well, what would he be doing all this time? He would not dead yet, which would be a wonder, his left hand would touch the air away from her temple, and kind of stay there to keep the hair away, and his right hand would get sort of nervous and move around to the back of her head, and when she laid against the heart beats a few minutes, and was making her heart, he would count the beat up to him and kiss her once for luck, if he was as foolish as a donkey swamp angel, and have her charge it in the bill; and then a reaction would set in, and he would be as weak as a cat, and she would have to lean him and rub his head till he got over being nervous, and then make out her prescription after he got asleep. Now, all a man's symptoms, except when a female doctor is practicing on him, and she would kill him dead.

The St. Louis doctor factory, and business in allowing women to do any thing that they can do as well as men.

in favour of paying them as well as men are paid for the same work, taking all things into consideration; but it is opposed to their trifling with human life, by trying to doctor a retail stranger. These colleges are doing a great wrong in preparing these female doctors for the same path, and we desire to enter a protest in behalf of twenty million men who could not stand the pressure. —N. J. S.

GRAND SATCHIS.

There was one of those old fashioned mistakes occurred on the train from Monro to Jameville a week or so ago. A travelling man and a girl who was going to Milton College sat in adjoining seats, and their satchels were exactly alike, and the travelling man took the wrong satchel and got off at Jameville, and the girl went on to Milton.

The drummer went down to Vankirk's grocery and put his satchel on the counter, and asked Van how his liver was getting along while he picked a piece off a codfish and ate it, and then smelled of his fingers and said "When? Van said his liver was not very torpid, thank you; how are you fixed for tea? The drummer said he wished he had as many dollars as he was fixed for tea and began to open his sample case. Van cut off a piece of cheese and was eating it while he walked along towards the drummer.

When the case was opened the drummer fell over against a barrel of brownies, and grasping a keg of maple syrup for support, turned pale and said he'd be dashed. Van looked in the sample case, and said, "Fixed for tea? I should think you was, but it wasn't that kind of tea want."

There was a long female nightshirt, clapped up in front with trimming and starch, and buttoned from Geneva to Revelations. Van took a better tryer and lifted it off, and there was more than a peck measure full of stuff that never belonged in no grocery. Van said, "If you are travelling for a millinery house I will send a boy to direct you to a millinery store."

The drummer wiped the perspiration from his face with a coffee sack, and told Van he would give him a million dollars if he never would let the house in Milwaukee know about it, and he chuckled the thing back in. "What is this?" said Van, as he held up a pair of giddy looking affairs that no drummer ever wore on his own person. "Don't ask me," says the drummer. "I am not a married man."

He took the satchel and went to Milton on the next train. The girl had opened the satchel which fell to her in the division, to show her room mate how to make a stick in croquet, and when the brown sugar, coffee, tea, rice, bottles of syrup, macaroni and a sack of cards came straight fairly squared. Along after dinner the drummer called and asked for an exchange, and they exchanged, and it was hard to tell which blushed the most.

A Funeral cheaper than a Spring Outfit.

"How is your wife this morning?" asked the pastor of Mr. Johnson.

"She died last night."

"Ah, that's a grievous affliction."

"Yes, I know it."

"But, Brother Johnson, it's an ill wind blows no good, and it is all for the best."

"I think so myself, sir, and I try to bear up under it."

"That's right, I'm glad to hear you say so."

"Yes, see I've just figured up that the funeral will cost $68.75, and the amount she had calculated on for spring clothes was $101.50. It is true that $22.75 is not much on such an occasion as this, but I try to be calm and not let my feelings overcome me."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS.

Not many months ago there was meeting of ministers in Wisconsin, and after the holy work in which they were engaged had been done up to the satisfaction of all, a citizen of the place where the conference was held, invited a large number of them to a collation at his house. After supper a dozen of them adjourned to a room up stairs to have a quiet smoke, as ministers sometimes do, when they got to talking about old times, when they attended school and were boys together, and the son man, who was present, dignified as a preacher, came to the conclusion that ministers were rather human than otherwise when they are young.

One two hundred pound delegate, with a cigar between his fingers, blew the smoke out of the mouth which but a few hours before was uttering a supplication to the Most High to make us all good, punched a thin elder in the ribs with his thumb and said: 'Jim, do you remember the time we carried the cow and call up into the recitation room?' For a moment 'Jim' was inclined to stand on his dignity, and he looked around to see if any worldly person was present, and satisfying himself that he was all truly good, he said: 'You bet your life I remember it. I have got a scar on my chin now where that d—d blessed cow hooked me, and he began to roll up his trousers leg to show the scar. They told him they would take his word, and he pulled down his pants and said,

'Well, you see I was detailed to attend to the calf, and I carried the calf up stairs, carried by Bill Smith—who is now preaching in Chicago; got a soft thing, five thousand a year, and a parsonage furnished, and keeps a team, and if one of those horses is not a trotter then I am no judge of horse flesh or of Bill, and if he don't put on an old driving coat and go out on the road occasionally and catch on for a race with some worldly minded man, then I am another. You have it well, I never knew a calf was so heavy, and had so many hind legs. Kick! Why, bless your old alabaster heart, that calf walked all over me, from Genesis to Revelations. And say, we didn't get much of a breeze the next morning, did we, when we had to clean out the recitation room?'

A solemn-looking minister, with red hair, who was present, and whose eyes twinkled some through the smoke, said to another,

'Charlie, you remember you were completely gone on the professor's niece who was visiting there from Doughkepaie? What became of her?'

'Charlie put his feet on the table, struck a match on his trousers, and said:

'Well, I wasn't gone on her, as you say, but just liked her. Not too well, you know, but just well enough. She had a colour of hair that I could never stand—just the colour of yours, Hank and when she got to going with a printer I kind of let up, and they were married. I understand he is editing a paper somewhere in Illinois, and getting rich. It was better for her, as now she has a place to live, and does not have to board around like a country school-ma'am, as she would if she had married me.'

A dark haired man, with a coat buttoned close to the neck and a countenance like a funeral sermon, with no more expression than a wooden dummy, who was smoking a briar-wood pipe that he had picked up on a seat outside that belonged to the host, knocked the ashes out in a spittoon and said:

'Boys do you remember the time we stole that three-wheeled wagon and went out across the marsh to Kingale's farm after watermelons?'

Four of them said they remembered it well enough, and Jim said all he asked was to live long enough to get even with Bill Smith, the Chicago preacher, for suggesting to him to steal a horse-hive on the trip. 'Why, said he, before I had got twenty feet with that live, every bone in my back had stung me a dozen times. And do you remember how we played it on the professor, and made him believe that I had the chicken pox?' 'O, gentlemen, a glorious immortality awaits you beyond the grave for lying like out of that scrape.'

The fat man huddled around uneasy in his chair, and said they all seemed to have forgotten the principal event of that excursion, and that was how he tried to fit a bulldog over the fence by the teeth, which had become entangled in a certain portion of his wardrobe that should not be mentioned, and how he left a sample of his timidity in the possession of the dog and how the former came to the college the next day with his eyes blacked, and a pair of trousers clothed down up to a paper, and wanted the professor to try and watch it with the pants of some of the divinity students, and how he had to put on a pair of mackinaw pants and hide his canines in a lost house until the watermelon scrape blew over and he could get them mended.

Then the small bonneted minister asked if he was not entitled to some credit for blacking the farmer's eyes. Says he: 'When he got over the fence and grabbed the rear horse by the tail, and said he would have the whole gang in jail, I felt as though something had got to be done, and I jumped out on the other side of the wagon and walked around to him and put up my hands and gave him one, two, three' about the nose, with my blessing, and he left me that horse and took his dog back to the house.

'Well, says the red haired minister, 'those melons were green, anyway, but it was the fun of stealing them that we were after.'

At this point the door opened and the host entered, and, pushing the smoke away with his hands, he said: 'Well, gentlemen, are you enjoying yourselves? They threw their cigar stubs in the spittoon, the solemn man laid the briar wood pipe where he got it, and the fat man said:

'Brother Drake, we have been discussing the evil effects of indulging in the weed, and we have come to the conclusion that while tobacco is always bound to be used to a certain extent by the thoughtless, it is a duty the clergy owe to the community to discontinue its use on all possible occasions. Perhaps we had better adjourn to the parlour, and after asking divine guidance take our departure.'

After they had gone the host looked at his cigar box, and came to the conclusion that somebody must have carried off some cigars in his pocket.
